CORBETT AND MITCHELL WILL FIGHT.

As we predicted last week Corbett and Mitchell will fight in Jacksonville, Fla., for the $20,000 purse offered by the Duval Athletic Club. There will also be side stakes of $5.000 a side. In addition to these, Corbett's manager. Brady, wagered Mitchell $1,000 that he (Mitchell) would not meet the American champion in the ring. The Englishman promptly covered the money, and convinced his friends that he was in earnest about the match.

Manager Brady signed the articles of agreement for Corbett, and, it is reported, Mitchell attached his sign ture to the same, and unless some unforeseen complication arises, the two men will meet in the arena in Jacksonville, Fla., on the night of Jan. 25, 1894.

For a year or more the sport-loving people of two continents have been interested in the proposed meeting of these two clever pugilists. The conqueror of John L. Sulliv n has convinced the American public that he is the greatest fighter of modern times. The admirers of the Englishman, however, remember that he, when a mere novice in the business, gave Sullivan a hard fight, and won a draw de-American his prime, and, as subsequent battles proved, invincible. Such being the case, it is natural that the Englishman's friends should believe that their champion stands an equal chance in the coming contest.

Taking the performances of the two men into consideration, we should say that they were pretty evenly matched as far as cleverness, science and ring tactics are concerned. But, when it comes to actual record and ring experience, it would seem that Corbett has the advantage. He has taken part in and won more finished battles than his opponent. He has proven himself the cleverest and most finished boxer in the American prize ring. He has also shown, in his fight with Peter Jackson for instance, that he possesses great staying quali-

On the other hand, Mitchell is considered to be the eleverest boxer in England. He is just as quick and knows as many ring tricks as Corbett. If John L. Sullivan's opinion is to be considered the Englishman is even a harder hitter than Corbett.

In view of these facts it is natural to assume that the contest will be a close one. The men being pretty equally matched, as far as we can judge, should give the spectators and the partisans a good show for their money.

At this stage of the game it would be folly to predict the outcome of the battle. Until the men have trained properly, and their physical condition is apparent, it would not be wise to wager any money on the contest. Let it suffice that the match has been arranged.

We are happy to say that the Police GAZETTE was largely instrumental in bringing about what a few weeks ago appeared to sporting men an utter impossibility.

FRAULEIN HEUER'S HISTORY.

The object of the contemplated congress of ballet directors, which is soon to take place in this country, is for the compilation and adoption of ballet dictionary. The idea, as I understand it, is to establish a universal ballet language, through this dictionary, which will be invaluable to those engaged in the art.

Ballet dancing, it seems, has five fundamental positions, just as music bas seven notes. All the various movements in dancing are based on these five positions, though capable of an infinite number of variations.

To obtain a clear and comprehensive idea of these many movements, the director of the ballet at the Paris Opera suggests that a picked body of the best ancers in the world attend the congress. They can then perform all the figures, and instantaneous photographs will be taken of each move.

given a technical name, which will be embodied in the projected dictionary.

"PLEASE LACE MY SLIPPER!"

As it is now, every ballet master has his own ideas | dent, is that the cherus is always a unit-never a of designating the various figures by all manner of hieroglyphics unintelligible to any one save himself. When the universal ballet language has been adopted the most intricate figures can be produced simply by interchange of what will then be known as ballet scores. The Parisian maitre de danse will be able to send his ideas to New York, and our own beliet masters will be able to reciprocate. By this system any important work can be given simultaneously in every part of the world, should it be desired.

While on the subject of the ball-t, I may add that there is always a very flood of gossip surging about that belongs to it. One is sure to hear the most fantastic stories about its members, but these stories, as rule, are mere moonshine.

There are instances where the managers have made it a point to get their ballet talked about simply for dvertising purposes, but only cheap affairs stoop to this. It is the callow youth that delights in talking about their imaginary conquests among the fascinating ballet girls. Alas if sifted down, these little private champagne

Thus, when the portly baritone remarks in an awe-inspiring recitative: 'Hark! Some one approaches,' straightway his forty odd retainers strike a hearkening attitude, with every ear alert, each body bent forward, and all necks craned to catch the distant sound detected by the keener hearing of the solo singer.

"Can you imagine anything more grotesque and absurd! In a like wholesale fashion are depicted astonishmept, terror, dismay, horror, despair and joy. I will have none of it. My idea is to have each member of my chorus taught separately to impersonate a certain distinct character-be it ever so briefly in view-so that the total shall insure a comprehensive array of intelligent beings instead of a set of automata.

"In other words," continues Miss Russell, "my theory is simply that everybody employed upon the scene should typify to the life whatever character be or she may stand for."

This idea is certainly a very commendable one, but it will entail much trouble in the selection of a proper chorus. I understand that Miss Russell has insisted that George Lederer, her manager, shall engage only beautiful women and handsome men, who would have to undergo a rigid examination as to their musical and dramatic capabilities.

It is very evident that to accomplish her present work of reform, Miss Russell will require a higher grade of talent in her chorus. This will be a sai blow to the statue-que and inane Agurantes who used to exhibit their incompetency, as well as their charms, on the Casino stage, and who were used only to sping the dollars of the young men about town. Mass Russell deserves to succeed in her new crusade.

Marie Janseu has made a solid success at the Bijon Theatre in "Delmonico's at Six," so much so that Manager Resenquest intends to have her play a return engagement in March that has no limit. Gin Mag-Donough's farce is not quite as devoid of heart as some of the dailies would have us believe, and it gives Miss Jansen an opportunity to do some clever acting, as well as sing some of the songs which fire: made her famous in the old McCaull days.

Some horribly wicked thief broke into the dressing. room of the Garden Theatre recently and got away with a good many pairs of tights. The result was that when the chorus started to dress for the per-formance of "The Algarian," a number of young romen blushingly declared that they could not go on.

An irreverent wag suggested a coat of paint, and for a time it looked as though there would be a serious sbrinkage of the chorus. Fortunately, however, the costumer managed to find some old tights, which had been stored away by T. Henry French after "La Cigale" had closed its season.

Some of the tights were too short and some too wide, while one girl from Boston, to whom a slender pair was given, declared that they were dreadfully narrow. The girls managed to get along, however, and new tights have been ordered.

Henry Irving and Ellen Terry opened Abbey's Theatre last week in Tennysou's tragedy of "Becket." The play was not quite up to the standard of the exquisite setting it received, and would have failed in less abler

Marta Heuer, the latest star at the Imperial Music ifall, has made quite a hit with her German songs. Fraulein Heuer has quite an interesting history. Although she is only nineteen, yet she has won the hearts of the Viennese by her clever chansonettes and peculiar style of dancing. This is not her first appearance in this country, but she did not appear in public during Her last visit to New York. About six months ago she eloped from Vienna with her cousin. Upon their arrival here, she was detained on Ellis Island by the Federal officers upon a cable dispatch received from her father, saying that she had run away and was under age.

After fifteen days' detention, she was sent back and became reconciled with her father. Then she made a second trip to New York, but she was recognized and detained three days, despite her protestations, until her father could be communicated with. She was finally released, and has since been living with relatives in this city. Fraulein Hener is a remarkably handsome woman, and possesses a welltrained voice.

"The Councillor's Wife" has duplicated the praise it received when it was first given at a trial matinee last year at the Madison Square Theatre. It is now settled for the winter at the Empire Theatre, where it is admirably acted by Henry Miller. James O. Barrows, Cyril Scott. W. H. Crompton, Viola Allen, Agnes Miller and May

There seems to be a fatality connecting the professional life of Sadie Martinot and Isabel Evesson. Miss Evesson succeeded Miss Martinot as leading lady of the Boston Museum some years ago; she succeeded her as leading lady at the Garden Theatre two years ago, and she has just been engaged to play leading business in the Boston Grand Opera House stock company in place of Miss Martinot, who has been secured by T. Henry Freuch for the production of "The Voyage of Suzette" at the American Theatre.

Marcus Mayer, who is busy looking after the interests of Patti just at present, tells me that it is altogether likely that Florence St. John, who was here four seasons ago at the head of the London Gaiety Company, will return here next September with her own company and under his management. "For the last five years," said Mr. Mayer,"Miss St. John has been appearing in burlesque. whereas her forte is light opera. She has just made a splendid success in 'The Mascot' at London, It was put ou as a stop-gap, but Miss St. John has made it a strong attraction. When she comes over, by the way, she will not sing in a repertoire of old operas. I will have a new work written for her.'

They have some queer names for things theatrical. nowadays. A "hardly able" company is, as you are perhaps aware, an organization that is hardly able to get from one town to another.

But the latest thing in troupes is the "fit up" com pany. This is an aggregation that frequents towns in which there are no theatres, and has to fit up halls of barns for theatrical use.

"Olaf," a tragedy founded on a German legend, 19 the latest offering of the Rosenfeld Brothers at Niblo's Theatre. It is magnificently staged and cleverly ininterpreted by a good company, which includes Minnie Seligman, Ellen Burg, T. B. Thalberg, George Fawcett and Charles B. Handford.

A Pretty Wife Betrayed by Her Bosom Friend.

WON A WIFE AWAY.

Mabel Tryon Ruined Through An Advertisement.

NAUGHTY DOINGS OF LOVERS.

A sad story is revealed by a divorce suit instituted by Mrs. William Gutbrie against her husband, a wealthy real estate dealer in this city. Mrs. Guthrie is a pretty woman and has two charming children. The co respondent in the case was her bosom friend. As wife and mother, Mrs. Guthrie first knew Blanche Butley as the winsome teacuer of her little tots in a Sunday school. This was several years ago and Blauche was but a slip of a girl. She is less than twenty now. The Guthries then lived at No. 114 West 104th street to be near his place of business, for Guthrie at that time had a real estate office at N . 903 Columbus avenue.

Guthrie himself was something of an elocutionist, and through his children he became interested in the Sunday school and church work. Whenever there was an entertainment he was more than willing to lend a helping hand. Bright, vivacious and eloquent, al-though not quite good looking, he soon became a general favorite, and was the centre of many a social oc-

At one of these Mrs. Guthrie and Miss Bentley met and were charmed with each other. Mrs. Guthrie is a handsome brunette-strikingly handsome, indeedand Miss Bentley is of the same type. Strange to re-late, they look a great deal slike, and from their first meeting they seemed to have many feelings in common. They were attracted to each other at once and soon became very dear friends, although Mrs. Guthrie, though a young woman herself, was several years her new friend's senior.

Miss Bentley became a frequent visitor at the Guthries nome and was an ever welcome guest, The children, a girl now twelve years old and a boy seven, took the greatest delight in seeing the Sunday school teacher at their home, and this served the more to find for her a warm spot in the mother's heart.

Mrs. Guthrie fell ill about a year ago, and her only desire was that Miss Bentley should be with her and should care for her. Willingly she came, and taking her place at the bedside, remained there night and day nearly all the time for a period of seven weeks.

It was a serious illness, and at times Mrs. Guthrie's life was despaired of, but under the patient and untiring nursing of her friend she managed to pull through.

The days of convalescence were extremely happy, for then she did not see the cloud that was gathering. During her illness her husband had more than ever before been thrown in Miss Bentley's company, and though the confiding wife knew it not, a cloud of sympathy had come between them. From sympathy it passed to affection and from aff ction soon to love. Still the wife was unsuspecting and her faith in her husband was unquestioned. She loved him and her

The awakening for her was harsh, but it did not come for some time, not until she had entirely recovered. It was difficult for her to believe her husband faithless, but she found that she could not down her suspicious and one day she charged him with it. His denials were not manly and at last he confessed. pleaded with him, pleaded for the sake of their children, and he promised all that was right and

But the promises were vain and were forgotten almost ere they were uttered. He now undertakes to say that he was not a willing victim and that he fell by wile. At all events, it soon became apparent to Mrs. Guthrie that it was beyond her powers to win her husband back.

She had tried hard for the sake of their children, but it was a futile task. They had moved to a new neighborhood, taking a handsome apartment in the Elizabeth, No. 234 West 134th street, but it made no difference. The husbands heart was far from his home. The wife's heart had become hardened by the trials she was forced to undergo. Despair had succeeded hope, and despair almost turned to hatred. The woman who had been her dearest fri nd was now the one she most despised. She turned for help to her parents, who are wealthy, and they demanded that she should immediately procure a divorce. She and her husband still lived under the same roof, but they never spoke now. The time had passed for that.

Heeding her parents' advice, Mrs. Guthrie's determination was soon made, and last week she calmly told her husband that she demanded a divorce. Infatuated as he was he jumped at the proposition. fact he agreed to furnish her with evidence that would easily be conclusive. He seemed glad to do it, but he wanted to shield the other. Some one else should be procured as co-respondent. To this, however, the injured wife would not assent. There was a limit to her endurance and it had been found. She would not be a party to shielding the one who had shattered her happiness and welfare. No,

The end came the other afternoon in a furnished room in the building at the southwest corner of Eighth avenue and 134th street, within a stone's throw of where the Guthries lived. The husband, with out a shadow of reluctance, had agreed to his wife's demand, and when at 2 o'clock she entered the room that her hu-band had rented expressly for the purpose, she found him there and with him the other.

There were witnesses for they are needed in courts of law, even when a divorce is asked for and one of the parties is willing. The other turned her head in shame when the wife entered, but Mrs. Guthrie resolutely made her turn about full face unto her shame.

Had it ended there it might have been a very ordinary, commonplace scene, but behind the desperate mother, out in the hallway, were her little ones. She had brought them with her that she might at least have some portion of revenge. It came to her, too, for although the man had desperately maintained his calmness until then, when the door opened at the mother's touch and the little boy and girl came in, he broke down utterly.

The mother had dressed them as for a feetival, and pretty and dear to him as they had ever seemed, they were even prettier and dearer to him then. He would have retraced his footsteps then, and on his knees he pleaded to be permitted.

But his entreaties fell upon senseless ears. The wife's heart was hardened and she said:

"Jamie and Belle, say goodby to your father. You will never see him again."

Innoceptly they said goodby, for it was not for them to comprehend what had passed and what was passing there. With a hand for each of them the mother left the room and her ordeal was over.

In a spirit of fun, one day a year ago, away up in Red Jacket, Mich. Miss Mauel Tryon answered a matrimonial advertisement. As a result of it she was complainant recently in a Chicago court against a young man whom she accused of desertion.

Miss Tryon is one of five daughters of Mr. Wm. W. Tryon, secretary to Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the American edition of the Review of Reviews, at No. 18

She left her parents to join her epistolary sweetheart in Chicago, but the wedding ceremony was deferred, and finally, when Lowery held out the inducements of a lite in the Grand Pacific Hote:, the young woman's scruples were overcome. Her period of happiness was brief, for Lowery's money soon ran out. In an unlucky hour she had told him of her former love for the stage. When the last cent was gone Lowery, she claims, told her she had a chance to utilize her love for the footlights. He would secure a place for her in concert hall in Spokane Falls, and she could send him part of her salary.

She consented, and sang there eight weeks as Mabel Taylor. Sue grew tired of the Far West and returned to Chicago. Lowery refused to support her and she had him arrested. This was in July. Lowery forfeited his bond, but the girl camped on his trail, and Friday located him and had him locked up.

William H. Douglass appeared in the Supreme Court, this city, recently, and asked for a divorce. He is a fine-looking man, and has a good position in a large business house. He said that his cou-sin, John Douglass, had been an occupant of his house in 127th street, near Park ayenue, and had looked after his family when business called him (William) from home. His wife went to Grand Rapids on April 15 to visit her mother, taking one little child along. and two days later cousin John left the city. Tuen William said, he closed his house and with the two children who had been left, went to board with friends.

Mrs. Douglass wrote to her husband frequently, the rash act in the presence of her lover. Miss Cora Marrieta, a young lady of twenty-two, a resident of that place, went to a drug store near by and obtained a large powder of morphine, which she carried with her to the home of Mrs. Wolf, who resides on Main street, saying that she had a cold and wanted to take some quinine. She went to the kitchen and took the deadly powder. Mrs. Wolf saw her throw some paper into the fire and asked her what it was. She said it was quinine. Mrs. Wolf said: "Are you sure it is not poison?' She said, laughingly, that she was. A few minutes after this her lover called, and she rushed to him and fell in his arms dying. She lived but a short time. This was her second attempt at suicide, being unsuccessful last September. No cause except fits of despondency seems to be evident now.

LYLA KAVENAUGH. [WITH PORTRAIT.]

Our theatrical page presents an unusually attractive picture of Lyla Kavenaugh, who first won her spurs in Rice's Surprise party, and in the company that supported Henry E. Dixey. Miss Kavensugh is a talented singer, and boasts of a figure that is unsurpassed in its wealth of charms on the American stage, She is under contract to Robert Gran for this season.

A COLLEGE GIRL'S THROAT CUT.

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.]
C. C. Baugh, a well known farmer, resides just west of Alliance, O. He and Mrs. Baugh recently left for a visit in Pennsylvania. The house was left in charge of their daughter, Miss Birdie, a very handsome girl and a student at Mount Union College. The men in the house were Thomas Strawn, the girl's uncle; her two brothers, aged seventeen and four-teen years, and Kirt Davidson, a hired man, who had been in Mr. Baugh's employ for several years.

Davidson did not come home at the usual time the other night. When the two boys and the uncle retired Miss Baugh remained to look after the fires. She remarked the absence of Davidson, saying: "Uncle Tom, I wish we were rid of that man."

When Mr. Strawn got up the next morning be noticed that Miss Baugh had not been in her room. He and the boys went to the kitchen and found it locked. They forced an entrance. The room was in confusion and a bloody poker lay on the floor. A trail of blood led to the barn, and there upon the floor they found the young woman dead.

Miss Baugh's throat had been cut and there was a wound on her head. Her dress skirt had been thrown over her body and all her clothing was torn and disarranged, plainly showing the object of the crime. About the same hour that Miss Baugh's body was found a farmer living half a mile away found Davidson on a pile of straw in his bern-yard with his throat cut. He had severed the windpipe, but not the jugular vein. He was conscious, and asked for a blanket, as he was cold, but he soon became unconscious. It was first thought he could not recover, but later he railied, and it is now thought he will get well.

Lynching is threatened. AVENGED HER ALLEGED WRONGS.

(SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.)

Caroline Schneider, a young woman living in West Hoboken, failing to get what she believed to be justice in the courts, filled a pitcher with vitriol and burled it at Gustav Bremer, whom she accuses of a grave crime against her, Beveral weeks ago she caused his arrest. He was indicted and tried in the County Court. He was acquitted. When the verdict was announced she swooned and an attack of hysteria followed. When she recovered she began to complain of the injustice of the verdict. She has evidently been watching for an opportunity to secure vengeauce, and it came the other night.

Bremer called at the butcher shop of Joseph Hubel, in Spring atreet. She followed a moment later. He was talking with Hubel and she interrupted them to upbraid Bremer. She was excited and he told her to go away. She grew wild with rage and threw the contents of the pitcher at him. He at-tempted to dodge the liquid, but it struck the side of his face and hands and ran down his neck and body.

Two women who were standing near him, Mary Oriel, of No. 400 Spring street, and Mary Koeller, of No. 416 Central avenue, were burned by the liquid on the face and hands and their clothes were ruined. A physician was called to prescribe for them.

Miss Schneider left the store promptly and returned to her home at No. 414 Monastery street. After Bremer and the two women had their burns dressed they visited Recorder Reinhardt, who issued a warrant for the indignant young woman's arrest. Acting Sergeant Doerfer went in quest of Miss Schneider, and learned that she had left home and come to this city.

BECAUSE HER FRIEND DIED.

On Tuesday, Mabel Hipple, the fourteen-year-old daughter of W. W. H. Hipple, an Allegheny, Pa., dentist, drank, her parents say, by accident, some carbolic acid, and died from the effects.

Her funeral was on Nov. 16. She and Lizzie A. Mc-Donald, the fifteen-year-old daughter of T. G. Mc-Donald, a pattern designer, living at 175 South avenue, Allegheny, had been loving playmates, with an unusually marked attachment for each other.

At the interment Lizzie walked forward to the grave and, looking into it, between her tears said: "Mabei, I'll meet you in heaven to-day." Afterward she returned, and going to a well-known drug store on Federal street, Allegheny, purchased five cents worth of carbolic acid.

Then she started for home, but on arriving there she went up the next door neighbor's steps, rang the door bell, then drank the poison. When the door was opened there she stood with her arm outstretch-d and the empty vial in her hand. In half an hour she was dead.

LOVE IN A SICK ROOM-STOLE HIS COUSIN'S WIFE.

Astor place. Since last spring Mr. Tryon has lost track | for tidings of the woman. In a few days a letter came of his daughter. Then she was with her parents in New York. One day she said she had an urgent message from a friend in Chicago, and left on the next train. Her father thinks that this friend was the young man with whom she had been corresponding after the newspaper introduction.

The Lothario proves now to have been W. E. Lowery. He was a bartender at No. 49 Clark street, Chicago, dressed flashily, and in the correspondence passed as being wealthy. Not to be outdone Mabel posed as the heiress of a millionaire. She sent her photograph to Lowery, and he, caught by the combi-nation of wealth and beauty, pleaded with her to come to Chicago, that they might be married.

Mabel was but nineteen, and, impressed with the seriousness of the step she was about to take, left Red Jacket, where she had been visiting a friend, and came on to New York to visit her father. He believes now she came on for advice, but that her courage failed her. Anyway, she said nothing to him of the secret correspondence, and during the time she passed in New York lived an exemplary life.

Mr. Tryon formerly lived in Minneapolis, Minn. but three years ago came to New York. Even before that time Mabel had become stage-struck and ran away, being gone for several weeks. When the family came East Mabel remained in the West with friends. A year later she joined a barn-storming company in the Northwest. When she lived so demure a life in New York her father congratulated himself on his daughter having overcome her passion for the stage, When the family would visit Coney Island Mabel would point at some of the short-skirt dancers and shulderingly suggest she might have come to that.

from Mrs. Douglass, in which she said: "I have determined to cast my lot hereafter with John. I am going to keep Beatrice, who is John's child, and the new baby, which is also John's." The letter also informed the husband that of the four children he had supposed to be his he was the father of only the two eldest.

When Douglass recovered from the shock he set about tracing the guilty ones, and with the aid of Lawyer W. R. Spooner, of 5 Beekman street, located them on Sept. 26 in Brooklyn, and there divorce pa pers were served upon the woman. She had her two and one-half-year-old daughter Beatrice and a baby with her. All were in court. Beatrice, who had clung to her mother's skirts in a half-frightened manner, ran to the man whom she had been taught to believe her father directly she saw him, and remained at his side while her mother and her real father gave their evidence.

"How long have you been intimate with your cousin's wife?' said Lawyer Spooner to John Doug-marked English drawl.

"Is Beatrice your child?" "Bo she tells me," said the man, referring to Mrs Douglass.

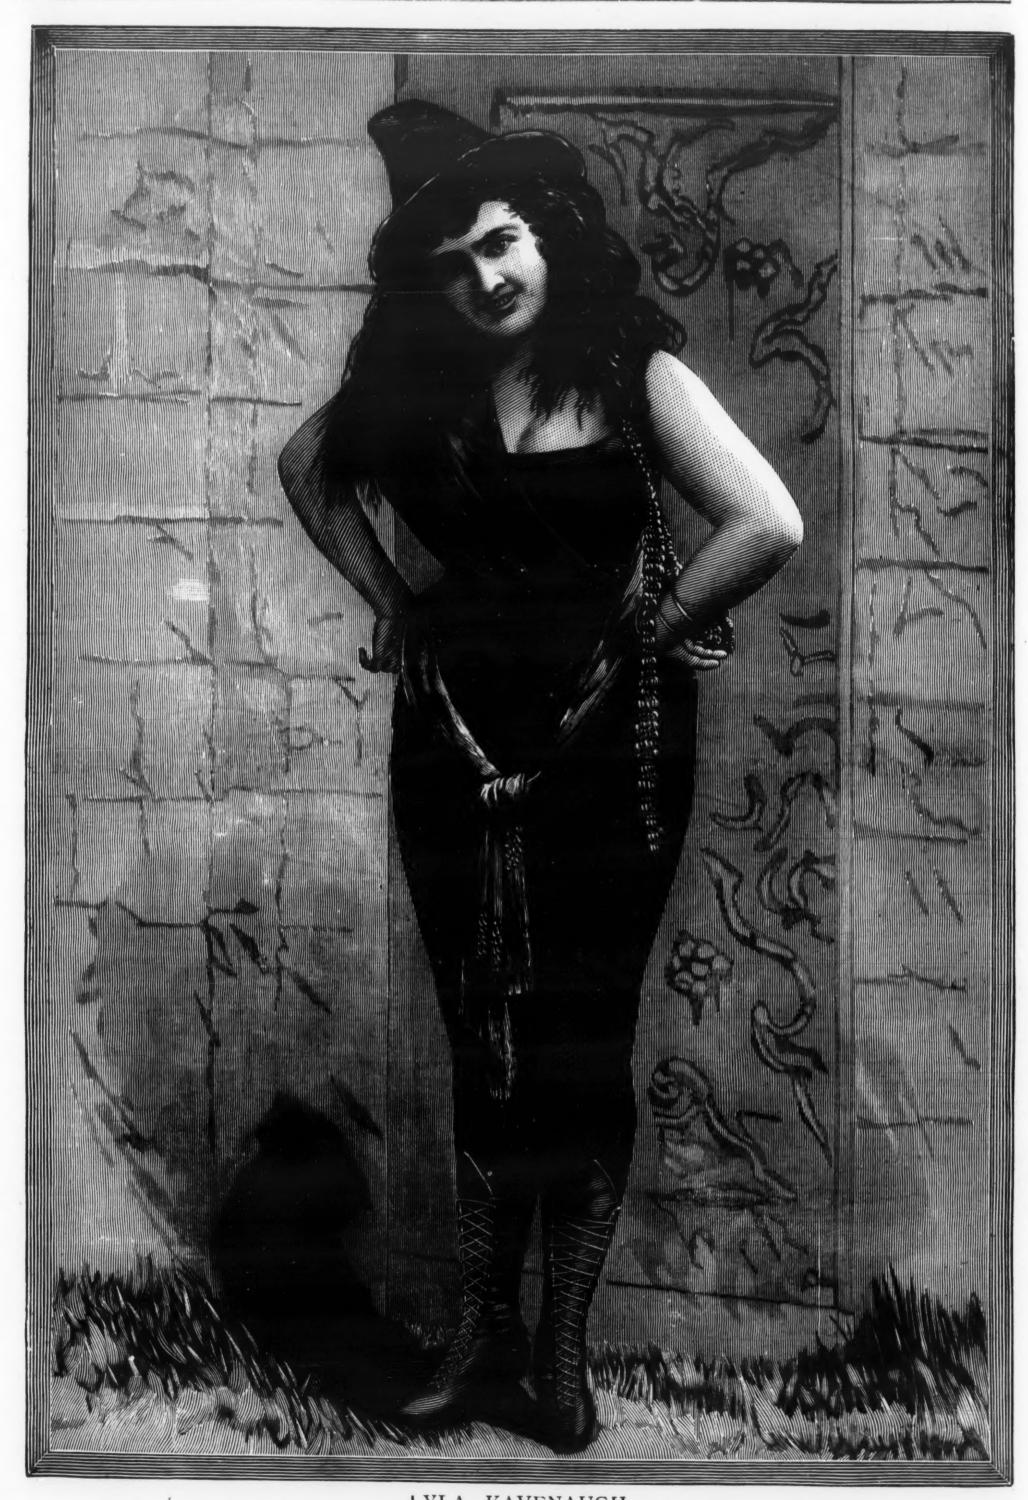

"Is the infant, Edith Robinson, yours also?" "Yes; she says so," auswered the co-respondent, in a shame-faced manner. Upon leaving the witness stand the cousin caught

Beatrice by the hand and said: "Come, Beatrice, I'm your papa." Judge Barrett gave Donglass his divorce.

How they came to get into this scrape they explain by saying: "We wanted to be boys, and we wanted to

The g ri . Eda Pawelski and Agnes Potts, are seventeen and sixteen years of age, and they are pretty. Their homes were, until they ran away two weeks ago, in Paterson, N. J. Ella was employed in Mrs. Clevelaud's boarding house at No. 17 Bridge street, Paterson. Agnes lived with her father, John Potts, a boilermaker, in the rear of No. 495 Main street, in the same

Ella called herself Bill Ryan when she took off her skirts and put on the trousers, the coat and the waistcoat. Agnes adopted the name of Jack Spenpard. which has a strong tinge of romance, not to speak of a flavor of Newgate. It will avoid confusion to call Ella "Bill" when she wore masculine togs and to call Agnes "Jack." Besides, that suits their wishes and

Having laid their plans to run away. Ella stole two "nobby pants," two coats, two shirts and some neckties. Agnes helped herself to two "pants," two hats, two coats and two shirts. So, between them, they stripped the wardrobes of Jacob Johnson and James McGinnis, who board with Mrs. Cleveland. Having bundled up these clothes, the two girls cunningly went to a barber shop on Grand street, Paterson. Snip, snip went the barber's scissors and their long bair disappeared. So much towards their metamorphoses into boys. But not enough. From the barber's the girls went to a dark basement in Jackson street, Paterson. They came out from the basement Bill and Jack. Bill had some money in his pocket that Eila had

Two very good-looking young boys were on the train from Paterson that arrived in Jersey City at 11:30 P. M. that Saturday. Bill was the tailer and the thinner. Jack was plump and had rosy cheeks and very bright blue eyes. The two boys boarded a ferryboat and started for New York. They stretched their legs out in the women's cabin and with the utmost assurance, looked about them. Two or three women noticed what extremely good-looking boys they were, and these women whispered to each other and smiled on Bitt and Jack. The boys grew bolder. There was their first adventure ready to their hand. Bill and Jack smiled at two girls who sat opposite to them. The girls smiled in return and blushed and giggled. Bill and Jack winked, raised their hats and said "Ab, therel' in that careless manner that is so captivating to some iil-bred young women. The girls on the ferry boat nodded. Bill and Jack arose and seated themselves next to the girls. Before the ferry boat reached New York shore the girls had given their names to the pseudo boys. The girls gave their names and said they lived in Greenpoint. Bill and Jack made what they called "a date" and kissed the girls goodby in a dark corner near the ferry-house. "A date" in ordinary language is an appointment.

Leaving these impressionable young women, Bill and Jack took the way of all countrymen. They wandered up the Bowery. But the Bowery is not what it used to be-was not, in fact, what Bill and Jack expected it to be. It grew later and later, midnight was far gone, and Bill and Jack were tired. They went into a cheap lodging-house and engaged a room together. They paid the unsuspecting night clerk his price for the room, and the clerk told his assistant to "take dese kids upstairs." Bill and Jack went to their room. 'Lodgings for men only was the rule of the house, and Bill and Jack did not feel entirely at home. Over the partition came to their startled ears the sonorous snores, the delirious mutterings, and the half uttered curses that make up the night sounds of a cheap lodginghouse on the Bowery. Bill and Jack, fully dressed, sat on their bed until the friendly daylight came peeping in and reassured them. Then they ventured to go to sleep. They slept until 11 A. M. on Sunday. They awoke, put on their coats and "pants" and went to a neighboring restaurant, where they breakfasted. Then they walked down the Bowery past Chatham Square, until they reached Baxter street.

Their unaccustomed habit, or their gait, or their very, very green bearing called attention to Bill and Jack. Before they knew it a crowd of street gamins and Bowery gutter boys were tagging at their beels. These boys make their living by their wits, and their wits are as sharp as a razor. They followed Bill and Jack and pointed at them and called them "sissies." and at last began to halloo at them. Bill and Jack saw a policeman, and, frightened, they sheered off Park Row into Baxter street. They reached No. 6 Baxter street which, singularly enough is a second-hand clothing store, and, more singular still, is kept by a woman named Cohen The crowd was at their heels.

Do yer vant some vine clo'es to-day?" asked the "puller-in" in front of Mrs. Cohen's. Then he looked sharp at Bill and Jack. "Girls, s' help me!" be exclaimed.

Bill and Jack hurried into Mrs. Cohen's shop. Luckily that estimable woman has children of her own. She told Bill and Jack they ought to be ashamed of themselves. They began to cry and hid themselves in the cellar. Bill gave Mrs. Cohen $1.35, and in consideration of that amount and of the clothes they wore Mrs. Cohen agreed to reconvert Bill and Jack for the infinite resources of Baxter street were at Mrs. Coben's command. She skirmished among her neighbors, and, by purchase or barter, procured two linen wrappers, two hats, a shawl and a jacket. But they clung to the shirts and the trousers. When it grewdark Ella and Agues climbed over the rear fence at Mrs. Cohen's to avoid the crowd that still lingered about the door They found themselves in Pearl street,

That night Elia and Agues took a ferry boat back to Jersey City. They went to Brother Newman's mission on Montgomery street and they were welcomed. But not at once. Brother Newman caught a glimpse of the trousers under the skirts of the wrappers. Brother Newman caught a glimpse of the trousers under the skirts of the wrappers. Brother Newman, as pastor, scented a fox trying to break into his fold. The ma tron of the mission or the matron of the nearest police station-Ella and Agnes are not certain whichwas called in. Then they were welcomed. Brother Newman so moved them by his exhortations that they declared they were converted. Nevertheless they ran away from the mission. Returning to New York, they were lounging around Battery Park when a strange m napproached them. He said something to them that so burt their feelings that they began to cry. Then the man apologized and, giving them a dollar, told them to go home.

But instead of going home Ella and Agnes went to the Woman's Lodging House, No. 6 Rivington street. They left there the next morning and went to Brook lyn by way of the promenade of the big bridge. Jame-Dougherty, a driver, who lives at No. 180 Ashford

Mrs. Halliday sprang upon her victim with the agility and ferociousness of a tixer, and displayed strength that few women are possessed of.

It was with difficulty that the Speriff and his assistants loosened her hold. After they had accomplished it, however, and placed her upon a couch she grew calmer, but when food was given her she dumped it into her lap and sat muttering incoherently.

MRS. DRIER'S EXCITING ADVENTURE.

Sergt. Roulette, of the Long Island City police, discredits the startling story told by Saloonkeeper Carl Prier, of 237 Vernon avenue, that place, who alleges that he and his wife were the victims of masked burglars at 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Shortly after that hour Drier ran to the Second Precinct station and told Sergt. Roulette that he had been robbed of $316.75. The next day the brewery collector called, but had to go away unpaid.

Mrs. Drier tells a straightforward story of the outrages she and her husband and servant were subjected to. She says that on the morning of the robbery she was awakened by a noise in her bedroom. It was her busband's birthday, and as she had not bought him a present she thought the person in her room was her husband playing a joke in searching her satchel, which contained $16 belonging to the servant. Mrs. Drier says she shouted, "Come to bed, you fool; that's Martha's

She was almost frightened to death by the gruff reply, shut your mouth or I will blow your brains out." The next instant two other men with handkerchiefs over their faces entered the room and pointed revolvers at her and her husband, while the gruff voiced man seized her husband and threatened to kill him if he didn't tell the combination of the safe. Fearing that the burglar would carry his threat into execu tion, Mrs. Drier begged him to spare her husband's life, saying that he didn't know the combination of the safe and that she would open it.

Two of the burglars then room, where the safe was. while a third kept guard over her husband, and the fourth guarded the servant. One of the burglars led her by the arm to the safe, while the other held a revolver close to her face. When she reached the dining-room she was so faint and nervous that one of the burgiars steadied her hand while she turned the combination knob. The eafe did not open at first and one of the burylars threatened to kill her. She begged them to leave her and they went out of the room into the salcon, where they pointed revolvers at her while she worked away at the combination.

The time, Mrs. Drier said, seemed like hours to her before she succeeded in opening the safe door. One of the burglars stood guard over her while the other rified the safe of over $300. She was then led back to her room. Here one of the masked men took her gold watch, but she pleaded with him so earnestly that he returned it to her. The four men then left the house by the side window, threatening to kill everybody if an outery was made.

HID THE GIRLS' SKIRTS.

SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION. The young ladies at Washburn College, in Topeka, Kap., have a class in gymnastics and are required to dress in Turkish costume, using a long skirt to conceal their costumes while going to and from the gymnasium. Last week while they were going through their exercises one of the boys at the college removed their skirts from the dressing room, and it was some time before they could get back to their rooms without running the gauntlet of the male students. The facts were reported to the faculty, and upon investigation a student named Charles Paddock was found to he responsible for the caper, and it was decided to expel him, but his associates have rebelled and declare they will leave the school if such a penalty is imposed on Paddock. The faculty is giving it further consid-

When Mrs. Losee went to the police headquarters she preferred a charge of assault to murder against a colored man named Doc Lewis, and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest on that charge. Doc Lewis occupied a room in the house in which Harriet Lee lived, and Mrs. Losee states that after she had fired three shots at the woman Doc Lewis came out of the house and took her pistol from her, and then went back into the house, procured his own pistol and, returning, fired two shots at her, neither of which struck her.

The Pretty Woman and Her Lover Beg For Their Lives.

HAD A VERY EXCITING TIME.

In the spring of 1891 George H. Fisher and Isabella Caswell were married in the Baptist church in Hanson place in Brooklyn. Bridesmaids were there and ushers and flowers and the wedding match from "Lohengrin," And the bride wore a white satin dress and a wreath of orange blossoms, and held against her breast a great bouquet of white roses, and lilies of the valley. Then they went on their honeymoon to the Falls of Niagara, and beheld the world through aglass that was of the tint of magenta.

Finally the tint faded away and they came back to Brooklyn, and George, looking about him this time through a glass that was absolutely colories -- bought a retail liquor saloon on the corper of Fourth avenue and St. Marks place, a wholesale liquor store next to the corner and half a d. zen houses in the neighborhood. George was 29 and Isabella was 26. That was in the spring of 1892.

In the winter of 1892 James Rutherford came over from England with his wife, calling himself Frank Tittman, and posing as a blase man of the world. His father sent him money regularly, and his wife, who, to oblige him, had stooped to pass under the name of Mrs. Tittman, was willing to take boarders. And Mr. Rutherford-or. in order to facilitate the telling of the story, Mr. Tittman-being 5 feet 10 and possessing lustrous brown eyes of wonderful magnetic power, had nothing to do but admire himself.

Mr. Titiman thought the States were beastly. He preferred England. Nobody knows exactly why he ever left England, but Mr. Tittman took great pleasure in deriding and belittling things American and praising all things English. Mrs. Tittman was very meek. Four months ago the Tittmans moved to the top floor of the house in which the Fishers lived, the house on the corner of St. Mark's place and Fourth avenue. Mr. Fisher was constantly busy in his saloon and Mrs. Tittman was constantly occupied with her boarders. Mr. Tittman and Mrs. Fisher bad

One day Mr. Tittman drank too much and spoke loosely of Mrs. Fisher.

"Fisher's no good," he said. "I ve stolen his wife from Lim and he hasn't said a word. If he were a man he'd do something." This came to Mr. Fisher's ears, and he was furious His first impulse was to throw Mr. Tittman and his magnetic brown eyes out of the top-story window. Upon second thought, however, he laid the matter before several of his friends and asked them for a lvice. They shook their heads seriously and said: "Y a ought to do something." Mr. Fisher ransacked his memory for some incident that might point to his wife's unfaithfulness, and, to h a surprise, found a great many. He remembered then how, during the past few months, his wife had oft in gone away for two or three days to visit her rela tives at Hempstead, and how Mr. Tittman and his eyes, magnetic and brown, had gone away on business trips at the same time. Mr. Fisher consulted his friend, Edward Downing, who is well versed in the duelling code, and asked him for advice.

"There's no doubt about it," Mr. Downing said. "You ought to do something."

It was arranged then that Mr. Downing should keep an ere on Mrs. Fisher, and if he found anything suspicious in her behavior to give Mr. Fisher his cue.

"I've got to do something," Mr. Fisher said in a furious voice.

Nothing happened for several weeks. Mr. Tittman kept his magnetic eyes upstairs, and Mrs. Fisher remained at home and Mrs. Tittman attended to her boarders. On Saturday the denouement came. Mrs. Fisher said she was going to visit her relatives in Hempstead. Mr. Tittman and both of his eyes were going to New York on business. Mr. F.sher was furious, but his friend Downing calmed him, and

You remain here. I'll follow her, and if anything is wrong I'll let you know at once.

"I'll try to keep calm," Mr. Fisher said, "but for God's sake do something !"

Mr. Downing followed Mrs. Fisher to the Flatbush depot, and saw her buy a ticket to Jamaica, too. On the car Mrs. Fisher met Mr. Tittman. When they reached Jamaica they went to Pettit's Hotel and asked for a room. Mr. Pettit took one look at Mr. Tittman's magnetic brown eyes and at Mrs. Fisher's blushing cheeks, and then saidthe was very sorry that the hotel was full, and, really-didn't they know?-he would have been only too-yes, of course. And, much chagrined, Mr. Tittman and Mrs. Fisher went down the

They came to Mrs. Hardenbrook's boarding house, which looked promising, and went in. Mr. Downing waited outside about ten minutes, to make sure that they were not coming out immediately, and then he ran to the nearest telephone station and telephoned to Mr. Fisher's store that the time to do something had

While Mr. Fisher was on his way to Jamaica, Mr. Downing summoued the Chief of Police. Justice of the Peace Hendrickson, two constables, a lawyer, and several other disinterested persons and laid the whole case before them. Justice Hendrickson shook his head seriously and said:

'Something's got to be done." "Yes," assented the Chief of Police, 'but there must be no violence."

In a little while Mr. Fisher arrived. The Chief of Police looked at him anxiously, as it he feared he was going to begin to shoot on the spot.

"Are they here?" Mr. Fisher asked. There was an almost imperceptible tremor in his voice, but outwardly be was calm.

"They're in a boarding house up the street." said Justice Hendrickson in a very tragic voice. Now, what a queer thing human nature is! Mr. Fisher took a long. health-inspiring breath of air, and with a smile that was positively cheerful, said:

"Thank God! Now let's go there and be done with

WORE HER BROTHER'S CLOTHES.

SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION Police ofrcies in Macon, Ga., were enlivened the other morning by a novel sensation. One of the officers brought in a handsome young prisoner. dressed in men's clothes. The prisoner was a woman. She was Miss Marie Shelver, about twenty years old, who lives at the old Rutherford place, about three miles from the town. She is a dashing-looking girl, a fine horseback rider and a high roller. She is known as "the dizzy blonde," and is o'ten seen riding a pony around town with a big, heavy revolver buckled to her saddle.

> Miss Shelver first attracted public attention some months ago by the prosecution of a well-known young man of Macon. Two young gentlemen called on the girl at her father's and we one of them was leaving the girl gave a loud scream that attracted her father's notice and he ran to her. She said that the young man had tried to drag her from the door. The irate father pursued the young gentleman, who was quite prominent and highly esteemed, captured him and led him by the horse bridle to the police station and had a case made against him. The young man denounced the accusation as false, and after being dragged through the police. city and superior courts was acquitted. The other night, as she has done many

THE GUILTY COUPLE PLEADED FOR THEIR LIVES.

"Will you give us your word of honor," the Chief of Police asked, "that you will not shoot or attack that man in any way?"

Mr. Fisher laughed. "Oh, Lord! no," he answered. lightly. 'I promise you I won't touch him.

Then they all went down the street and stole quietly up the stairs of the boarding house.

A servant knocked at Tittman's door, on the pretext that a message was to be delivered. Tittman opened the door and Fisher and the others pushed their way in. Tittman with but a single garment on his back, made for the window and was about to leap to the ground, thirty feet below, when the detective seized him. Mrs. Fisher was found, undressed, crouching behind the bed. She begged for mercy, and then Tittman fell on his knees and cried:

'For God's sake spare my life!" The wife was dragged out, and there, before ber husband, Justice of the Peace, Downing, and the detective, she, too, fell on her knees in terror. With trars streaming down her face she besought her husband not to shoot. He did nothing but said that he would get a divorce at once, and then formally introluced the guilty pair to the Justice of the Peace and the detective, that the latter might identify them in the future. This done, he hurried to the depot to take the Hampton train, so that he might inform his wife's parents of the affilr.

As soon as she clothed herself Mrs. Fisher sent for Mrs. Hardenbrook and said that neither she nor Tittm in had much money, but she promised to pawn her $250 diamond ring, if necessary, to pay all bills. The Justice remained with the detective at the door to see what the Englishman would do. The latter's only de sire seemed to be to get away. He said he would go to his wife and arrange matters as well as possible. Those who know him well believe that he wanted to bey her not to cable to his family, believing that if she should do so his allowance would be cut off. It is said that he expects to receive $18 000 within a few days. He and the woman left the place together and in gloom and essayed to go forth and enjoy life. She was amply protected from personal violence by convenient Smith & Wesson cleaned and charged to the point of perfection.

For some time she viewed Macon by the flickering glimmer of carbons and meteors, and made those of the male population with whom she came in contact envy the dashing young sport she was supposed to be. The spotless linen, the flashy and fashionable tie, the smooth white hand, the delicate and shapely little foot in its patent leather casing, the soft, mellow voice. the bewitching, dancing blue optics, the erect bearing and graceful carriage and winning ways of the dashing young sport created quite a sensation wherever visited, and if it all wasn't fun it was "most."

Just after the old town clock had tolled the midnight hour a policeman saw Marie board a back, and recognizing her, even in her brother's new fall suit. approached, and motioned the cabby in charge to "stay." Realizing the situation Marie shouted in true stage style, "discovered," and embarking on the opposite side sought to save berself by flight, but the fficer wanted a little exercise himself and joined the chase. Marie was not only discovered, but captured. She was carried to police headquarters and opposite the name which bore a strange contrast to her boyish appearance was written "public indecency.

Marie had a liberal supply of the "stuff," and with a careless nonchalence handed up a collateral for her appearance before Recorder Freeman the next morning.

When the case was called by Recorder Freeman Marie did not show up and her collateral of $15 was forfeited.

The respectability of the girl's family and the fact that the worst thing that has been generally charged to her was being wild, caused her razzle-dazzle to create quite a sensation.

SLAUGHTER ENDS A WEDDING FEAST. [SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION]

Douglasville, a small colony, a few miles southwest of Abilene, Tex., was the scene of a double and bloody tragedy the other night.

Trinidad Romer, a young Mexican, thirty years old, was killed by Julius Larinski, a Polish settler. Romer was desperately enamored of the only daughter of Larinski and his suit was favored by the girl's father, but she had fixed her affections on another man. The favored suitor was of her own race in the person of Nathap Borowski. Sorowski had little to offer other than his love, while Romer was considered very wealthy.

Recently Lurinski informed Romer that he looked upon his suit with favor, and that if be could arrange to put Sorowski out of the way that he could no longer push his suit he would give him the hand of his daughter in marriage.

Shortly afterward Borowski disappeared as if swallowed up by the earth, leaving smooth sailing for Romer, who was married to Miss Lurinski. At the wedding feast Romer acquired a high degree of beastly intoxication and boasted of the fact that he had killed Sorowski and that he was abetted in his crime by Larinski.

This so enraged the newlywedded Mrs. Romer that she attempted to cut the throat of her husband with a butcher knife, and was only prevented by her father stepping up and wrenching it from her. Then the bride thought that all were leagued against her, and with a despairing she turned from husband and plunged the keen blade into her own white throat, cutting it from ear to ear, and then fell dead.

This crazed Larinski and looking upon Trinidad Romer as the sole cause of the tragedy he emptied both barrels of his shot gun into his body with fatal effect.

The strangest part of the whole weird and almost impossible story lies in the fact that Sorowski who was supposed to have been murdered by Romer, should return the next morning just after the double killing.

He made the statement that he was hired about a month since by Romer for the sum of $13 to go to Etdy, N. M., and see a man about a projected cattle deal.

On his arrival there he declares he learned that no such person had ever lived to ere or had been there at any time. He then returned to Douglasville.

MITCHELL AND CORBETT SIGN.

The Two Pugilists Agree to Fight In Jacksonville, Fla.

NO FEAR OF INTERFERENCE.

(SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.)

The long pending fistic encounter between Jim Corbett, of San Francisco, Cal., and Charley Mitchell, of London, England. has at last been arranged, and the two famous prise ring gladiators will battle according to "Police Gaz-tte" rules in Jacksonville, Fig., under the auspices of the Duval Athletic Club, on January 28 for a purse of $20,000 and the boxing champion ship of the world. It has taken nearly three weeks to arrange

On Nov. 14 a meeting was held at the Gedney House, New York, between Mitchell, William Brady, Corbett's manager, and Henry Mason, of Jacksonville. Mitched was represe by Ise Thompson, the well-known bookmaker, and Billy Thompson, of Australia. The meeting was held with closed doors, and the only other persons present were Joe Vendig (Circular Joe). Wm. E. Harding, the sporting editor of the POLICE GAZETTE, who was present by the invitation of the Duvai Cub representative, to assist in arranging the match; H B. Hackett and Dan Smith, of the New York Herald.

Articles of agreement simost identical with times recently or a artist to New Oriesus were spread upon the table. Besides an instrument bearing the signatures of two prominent men chants of the town in question, guaranteeing protection to the principals before and after the fight, was exhibited.

Nor was tois all. Mr. Mason had in his inside pocket $5,000. which he offered to divide between Mitchel and Corbett as apon as the papers were properly signed.

The articles of agreement were read. There was a clause that if the contest was beginning to be brutal, that the referen should have the power to stop it and declars the boxer having the b st of it the winner. This clause was struck out, it being lecided that a referee had no power to stop a contest. After the articles were read by Joe Vendig, Mitchell perused the protocol and appeared satisfied with the conditions, but he was know if the Davai Club was responsible, and who was to hold the money. The representative of the Duval Club stated that he was satisfied to deposit the money with the POLICE GAZETTE Mitchell said Richard K Fox suited blm, but Manager Braus oid he was satisfied with the POLICE GAZETTE heiding the forseit money, but that he wanted the purse posted with the ref-

The question then came up in regard to who should be the Al Smith, Jere Dunn, Wm. E Harding and John Duffy of New Orleans, were named, but the intter was dropped because it was intimated that neither Al Smith or Wm E Hard ng would accept Brady, who was in a hurry, was ready to sign, but Mitchell stated that he would not sign any articles in New York State, or even leave the State to sign articles because he did not want to be amenable to the law. He said if he could find out that the contest could be brought off in Jacksonville that he would go there to meet Corbett.

Joe Vendig said Phil Dwyer, the turfman, wou'd guaranter the responsibility of the parties who were giving the purse Mitcheli said if Phil Dwyer said everything would be all right he would agree to meet Corbett, but not on Jan. 4, any time be-tween the 10th and 19th of January. Mitchell then asked Mr. Mason where the purse was. Mason said he had the certific checks with him ready to put up as soon as the articles of agreement had been signed.

The newspaper men who were present, at the auggestion of Manager Brady, were then asked to leave the room, as well as ail parties not directly interested. A secret meeting was held between Mitchell, Brady and the Daval Cub representative. What arrangements were made or discussed only the partie

Proceeding to the Hoffman House, Mitchell and Ike Thompand Phi Dayer and Mr. Mason. For perhaps an hour they taiked over the match. Later on Brady had another taik with the Britis: champion who asked that Jan. 25 be substi-tuted for Jan. 4, as the date of the contest. One more wrangle. Brady said Corbett would lose a ten of money if he threw up holday dates. Finally Mitchell announced his ultimatum.

"I will fight before the Duval Athletic Cipb." he said, in the presence of so great a crowd that Billy Edwards and Detective Jacobs began to think of election times. "I'll fight him on Jan 25. I have not $5 000 of my own to put up as a guarantee of my appearance in the ring. D. H. Blanchard, of Boston, holds $10,of mine. Haif of that will suit nicely for my guarantee I'll bet Corbett the balance I whip him, and there you are." Brady warmed up at once, and tried to make a better arrangement, from his point of view. But Mitchell was obdurate. Rising from his chair, Brady exclaimed excitedly; "Well, we'll accept that proposition or any other proposition you may choose to make, Mr. Mitchell.' d," remarked Mitchell "And what's more," cried the highstrung manager for the ther side. "Pd bet you $1,000 to-morrow that you don't get in he ring with Corbett." Mitchell smited at this and suggested that the money be put ip at once. Ike T. ompson hove in sight and offered to make such a bet with Brady several times. "I'll accommodate you," said Corbett's manager, "and I shall have a proviso that if there is any police interference and I do not prove positively that Mitchell caused it, I'll lose my

By this time everybody in the cafe was listening to the argunent, and it was thought advisable that an adjournment b taken. No articles were signed, but before many days they will be if Mitchell keeps his word.

As fi-tic matters now stand the men will fight at the Jackson ville Cinb on the evening of Jan. 25 next. The cinb will give a purse of $20,000, and as soon as articles are signed will pay Mitchell and Corbett $2,500 each for training and traveling exheir views freely and each gave it as their distinct opinion that the other side wasn't on the level. "That man will never get in the ring with Corbett," said "You'd see, you'll see," and as he vanished up Broad way he waved his arm in the air and repeated, "you'll see." "Tout man Brady has been making cracks at me ever since came to this country," said Mitchell to blagroup of bystanders 'I'd like to know what I've done to make him think I'm afraid to meet his man. I simply want my rights '

There is likely to be a hitch on the question of referee. Mithell says he will agree to Al Smith or George Siler. Brady says Mr. Smith won't agree to referee, but the opinion of the sports uplown was that he would yield rather than break up the Mitchell says he will not allow the referee to enter the ring. This settled, the wager by Brady was taken up, and after some discussion, a paper stipulating its terms was drawn up.

Mitchell deposited in the hands of Joe Vendig $1 000 earlier in the day, and this amount was covered by Corbett's manager, who bets that Mitchell will not appear in the ring on the date named. A proviso was inserted to the eff of that in the event of any interference with the contest Brady would assume to prove to the satisfaction of Phil Dayer, who is to hold the money, that Mitchell had a hand in the interference. Sh be successful in this, Brady wins; otherwise the money is to be drawn in case the fight does not come off.

Mr. Erlanger, of the theatrical firm of K aw & Erlanger, who happened to be present, offered to bet $5.0.0, taking the Mitchell end of the proposition, and, for that matter, the English champion himself said that he would like to place a few more buts on the same basis

Mitchell left for Syracuse at 9 o'clock that night. He begun his engagement with Powers & Edwards in that city but as it is necessary for him to go into training pretty soon for the fight he will not have an opportunity of drawing his $2 000 a week salary many times, unless he should be successful in the championship contest. Brady had a long talk with Corbett over the telephone. The American champi n will continue his training at Asbury Park for several weeks at least. The probabilities are that he will put on the finishing touches somewhere in the vicinity of Jack-sonville. Mr. Mason left for Florida the next day. And now sportsmen of a speculative turn of mind may go shead backing their opinions as to the probable result of the fight.

That great sporting mogul appeared to have benefited by his trip which was one of busicombined with pleasure. He appeared pleased to hear that Charley Mitchell and Jim Corbett had been marched, When the National Sporting Club, of London were trying to raise a purse I offered to put up toward it, also to give a championship trophy, value $2.500 for Corbett and Mitchell to contend for, and to represent the bexing championship of the world. I shall give this trophy in any event, as there is no belt representing the championship according to the rules they now fight by; for pugilists nowadays fight with gloves for the championship, instend of according to London prize ring rules " Mr. Fox says boxing is all the rage in England and seldom a day passes without a competition or a prize fight with gloves; this many sport is legal there. Lord Lonsdale and himself having tested the case two years ago, and won at considerable expense. He said during his sejourn in Europe, he had given champions! ip trophies for swimming, jumping, etc , and he had the pleasure of eing the fastest mile ever swam in water in the ra of his trophies, by Joe Nuttai. He appeared surprised when he heard James Walter Kennedy had lifted the "Police Gazette" 1,205-pound dumb-bell, but he supposed Kennedy had lifted it fairly when the Judges were representatives of the New York Herald and New York Sun. He said he would have another dumb-heli made to weigh 1,500 pounds and that he would give a trophy valued at $1,500 to any athlete who could lift it. gard to the Mitcheli-Corbett fight for $30,000, with bexing chainpionship, Mr. Fox said both are first-class boxers and he had no choice, but he trusted the contest would be brought off sportsmanlike manner, and the best man would win -New York Daily News.

Inever did believe a pugilist could have a class chance of defeating another, who might be just as r. In aix or ten rounds even according to Queensberry or her tinzetto" rules. Horses can show their best running ult tank for a puglifist or a wrestler to win on time or in a ted number of rounds, that is if the boxer or athlete he is conbut arainst is equally as good at the game. O'Donnell is a knocker out, but he is a skillful, scientific boxer, and what most as a left hand jabber. It is doubtful if he would ever as a star if all the battles he was to engage in were to be a al number of rounds. It takes more than a first class man ok another out in four or six rounds Even John L. Sull who introduced the game about twelve years ago, was often ed even when meeting puglifats who were not first class. not think that O'Donnell's reputation is in any way everest colored boxers who ever stood in a ring, and who met some of the best men that ever put on a fighting shoe med a set of the "Police Gazette" champion boxing gloves, ik there are very few boxers in America who can kn Godfrey in six rounds, if big gloves are used, the same size

The wonderful performances of John S. gson, the phenomenal wheelman, has created quite a sen-on in all parts of the world. Who ever dreamed a bicycle could drive a wheel one mile within twenty seconds of the est time ever made by a running horse. Salvator ran one ge in one minure thirty-five seconds, which is the fastest mile serrun on any track in the world by a horse. Johnson rides ile in one minute and $5 seconds with a flying start, and on with a standing start runs a mi e in one minute fifty-right done-fifth seconds. Years ago when David Stanton came to mentry and attempted to ride a bicycle against a trotter he s aughed at, and when he fail d to best the horse many said much never be recorded for a bicycle rider to beat a trotter, provements have been made in bicycles since that time, and cression has also been made in trotting, and yet to-day ters are not in the race with champion cyclists. It is not ain when the new electric appliance is attached to the new yels but what they will not only easily outspeed the trotters, t run neck and neck with race horse time. Johnson is a nderful wheelman and the greatest in the world. His per-mances of Nov. 7, 6 and 9, at Independence, proved it, while m Nov. 10, he beat several records. If Nancy Hanks is allowed scord on a kite-shaped track, why should Johnson not have is same credit? He first started for the one-eighth mile fiving rt, making the distance in 0:12 2 5, or one second better than hend record. On his second attempt he lowered his one-third nie flying start record to 0:34 3-5, or three-fifths of a second tter than his previous time. The 100-yard flying start he made in 0:5 2-5, and the standing start in 0:9 1-5. The oneeighth mile standing start he covered in 0:17 1-5. Johns press agent does not state who timed the boy or who certified to correctness of the track measurements. Public faith in vate bleycle records is not great this fail. The temptation, ng to financial considerations, to make new records is suffi-ntly strong for the Racing Board to make more careful rules verning them. The Amateur Athletic Union has been conted with the same difficulty, and the solution was found refusing to accept records unless they were made in open . The League of American Wheelmen rules per men to steal away to isolated tracks and there make receds as they please with their employers and fellow employes. They have their own starters, timers and track measurers, and, fact, control the situation. The wisdom of leaving a premium fore stringent rules will be adopted. It is said that it costs bimanufacturers several hundred dollars a week each when they want to smash records. Expenses roll up for pacemakers Being men, trainers, &c. It makes no difference whether the nateur Union or the League of American Wheelmen try to brow cold water on Johnson's records, this paper will always give him credit. I believe in fair play and Johnson's recor thould not be questioned by a few jealous amateurs who cannot lmitate the Minneapolis wonder.

If F. E. Bacon, the English amateur chamon is eager for a race. Tommy Conneff, formerly of Dublin. now a full fledged Irish-American, will give him a chance. Conneff says, in reply to the statement that Bacon would like to meet Conneff at an indoor meeting this winter, that he is just as auxious to run Bacon as the Englishman is to · But I would never consent to an indoor race or a race in the winter," says Mr. Conneff. "An indoor race would be most unsatisfactory. It wouldn't be a fair test. There are the many things to throw a man off, particularly the short turns where a man would be apt to rnn wide. The straights are so that the rear man would have but little chance of catching up. Nor is a man in his best form in winter, not having that elasticity which he needs to be fit and which exists only warmer weather. I expect to run again at the Day games of the New Jersey Athletic Club, and would be over-

Pete McCoy, the well-known middle-weight Paglist, either follor jumped from the tog boat Scranton, while the its way to Buston, Mass, on Nov. 8. His body was seen by men on the first barge behind the tug and a ladder and boat were thrown over for him to cling to, and from the second barge a rope was thrown close to him, but he made no attempt grasp either of them, and disappeared under the water. The cruised about until there was no chance of recovering Mey's body and then came here McCoy and McNulty both mardaughters of Capt. Biley, an old towboat man, who lives on antic avenue, in Boaton. McCoy was on his way home from w York to his wife, who lives there. He j-ined the tug in boken. He was thirty-five years old, and well-known as a igilist, a sporting man and ali-round athlete, and he was a mber of the John L. Sullivan theatrical combination when the ex-champion made a dramatic tour of the United States.

James C. Medway, the "Police Gazette" chamn trick jumper of America, is greatly disapprinted because les Darby, the champion trick jumper of England, refused to arrange a march with him, although after he came to this country he issued a challenge to jump against any man in Tork.

rical company and can arrange no match. Darby when he issued his deft, was under an engagement, and he was, no doubt, aware that his challenge would not amount to anything excepts free advertisement. Medway, with his backer Davy O'Connor, the well-known castern bookmaker, was ready to arrange a match with the alleged man bird. Medway is the champion jumper at the same style of jumping as Darby. He can accomplish feats Darby cannot equal, let alone boat, and Darby has found that out, since he invaded America and threw down the gauntlet. Probably this is the reason the man bird roluses to attempt to fly against Medway, the American eagle. I recently met Medway and asked him what he thought of Darby. The champion said: "He is clever but he does not begin to accomplish the feats I expected. I can easily duplicate every feat he performed, and I am positive that I can perform several feats he cannot. The bricks Darby jumps from are three imes the size I use, and most have been made on purpose The bricks I jump from are the ordinary size American brick. inches long, 4 luches in breadth and 3% inches thick. Durby is all right in his business if he would not use the title of champion, which he cannot hold until he defeats me." Medway is confident he can defeat Darby and the English champion should put up a deposit and arrange a match.

At the time Dick Burge left this country for England he stated that on his arrival he would arrange a match with Tom Tracey, the Australian champion welter-weight, and be promised to secure a purse from the National Sporting Club for Tracey and himself to fight for. With this understanding Col. John D. Hopkins posted $500 to bind a match between Burge and Tracey. No word has been received of Burge, and Col. Hopkins is patiently waiting for a rep.y, as he is eager to match the Australian against the Englishman. A contest between Burge and Tracey would be a first-class drawing card for the National Sporting Ciub.

I see that Tom Williams, of Australia, of whom I have pleasant memories, is matched to fight Bidy Rob-lason, better known as Cock Robin. Williams is the pugliist who caused such havor with betting men's pockets by being defeated by Billy Smith, of Boston. After Smith defeated him he went back to England and did not try to regain his lost laureis. I expected he would keep his light shining, but for some unex-plained reason he made no effort to secure another match until recently. Should be knock Cock Robin off the pugilistic tree he will have nother bird in the tree to dislodge in Tom Tracey, of Australia, who is spoiling for a fight.

I see the American Turf Congress has been making new changes in the racing rules. Here they are: "As there has been some question raised as to the real meaning of a 'stake' and a 'purse' race, the following rule has been adopted to make the dis inction clear: Races that close the evening be fore, where the entrance money goes to the first horse under the definition, will be regarded as a jurse. Where more than eight entries have been made in a race owners can scratch down to that number free of charge. Hereafter geidings, twoyear-olds, will be allowed three pounds; three-year-olds and up wards, allowed five pounds to Sept. 1 and three pounds there after. Jockeys must weigh out and in with their bridies. Neither the starter nor his assistant shall acquire knowledge of the bet ting previous to a race. In case of a dead heat in a selling race owners can divide, but both horses must be sold, the surplus over the selling price to be divided between the third horse and the association. Any party offering to or entering into an agreement or a consideration to bid or not to bid on a horse winning a selling race shall be ruled off. The fee to a jockey in races of $500 to the winner shall be $5 for a lesing mount and $15 for a winning mount; in all other races, in the absence of a special agreement, $10 for the losing mount and $25 for a win-Any person offering a jockey more than the fee provided by the rules, except through his employer, may be fined or ruled off, and any jockey accopting or demanding than that provided by the rules may be fined and ruled off

O'DONNELL AND GODFREY FIGHT A DRAW. The glove fight between Steve O'Donnell, of Australia, and George Godfrey, the clever colored boxer of Boston, Mass., was decided recently in the Metropole Club, Providence, R. I.

The contest was only to be 6 rounds, and it was stipulated that one man must have a decided advantage to be declared the winner. The men fought for the gate receipts, and Jesse Brown officiated as referee.

About 5:45 the puglitats appeared in the ring, Godfrey being attended by his brother Jim and John Ferrell. Ike Weir acted as timekeeper. O'Donneil was esquired by Mike Sears of Lewiston, Prof Whitford Jack Finnerty and Mike Haiey. His timekeeper was James Daiy.

Time was called at 9 o'clock. After a few seconds of caution sparring Godfrey landed the left on the face, but was countered light y on the side of the head.

The Australian feinted until he drew Godfrey, and as the lat ter came at him O'Donnell labbed him in the no to anger Godfrey, and, rushing in, he smashed O'Donnell on the kidneys with the right.

After an exchange at close quarters Godfrey reached the ribs with the right and the blow made O'Donnell wince. The latter "fiddled away" for a few seconds and then jabbed Godfrey in the nose and mouth, but O'Donnell received some good 'rib-roast-ers" at close quarters.

ROUND 2—Godfrey seemed to be encouraged with the showing he made in the first round, and he forced the pace, but he to land one of his favorite jabs, but fell short and Godfrey reached the face with the right and a second later Jabbed O'-Donnell in the mouth with the left A hot exchange then occured. After getting Jabbed twice in the mouth Godfrey labbed anell's mouth with the left, and when O'Donnell tried t retaliate Godfr-v countered him hard on the cheek bone with the right, and raising a lump and dazing O'Donnell

ROUND 3-The friends of O'Donnell thought he had been laying back in the previous rounds, and his determined look when he left his corner caused them to think that he was going to annibilate Godfrey the same way he did Cattanach. He may have started out with that idea, but when he received another right counter on the sore cheek bone he changed his mind. He did to make any effort after that, while Godfrey jabbed him several times in the mouth and nose, and rec ived only a few light returns. Near the close of the round the colored m reached the Australian's face with both right and left.

ROUND 4-A sharp jab on the nose by O'Donnell signalized the

Godfrey then tried with the left, but O'Donneil cleverly avoided it and sent his left on the face. In his next essay Godfrey reached the ribs, but was countered hard on the face, and a and later received a right on the ribs

The Australian worked Godfrey up into a corner and resum his jabbing, and received only a light counter in return Australian then rattled Godfrey a bit with a jab on the and when the colored man rushed in O'Donnell stopped him with a left and right on the face and body.

ROUND 5 -- O'Donnell again caused the hopes of his friends to fall by his work in this round. He acted as if he was holdling back to the final round. He did not seem to be able to reach Godfrey, and only once or twice did he land a clean blow. the other hand. Godfrey jabbed him in the mouth and eye and sent the right hard on the ribs twice.

ROUND 6-They lost no time after getting to centre, and after a light exchange Godfrey tried for the wind, but the blow just barely reached O'D monil. When the Boatonian again rushed, O'Donnell smashed him in the face and sent the right on the ribs. Godfrey again sent the right on the ribs and received a stiff counter in the face. The colored man tried the same bi over again and met with the same result. O'Donnell then backed Godfrey against the ropes and Jabbid him in the face. man was in the act of letting go when the bout was declared ended The referee called the contest a draw

R. W., Iowa City.—George F. Slesson was born in De Kalb, De Kalb county, N. Y., March $ 1854. making him nearly a year older than Schaefer. He has figured prominently before the public in tournaments and matches all over the States. probably engaged in more contests than any other player of his age in the world. His first introduction of prominence to the public was at Rochester, N. Y., in 1881 when he won the first prize in a tournament, defeating Maurice Day, Kimbali and Frank Fitch. In a tournament held at Tammany liali, this city, from Nov. 15 to 22, 1875, for money prizes, he defeated Rudolphe, Daly and Garnier, and was in turn beaten by Sexton, Jos. Dion and C. Dion. With a score of 482 he was captured by Sexton at the same hall on Jan. 27, 1886, for a stake of $1,000. Game-three-bail, 600 points up. During the Centennial tournament, held in Philadelphia, May 15-27, 1876, he won the third prize, and at the subsequent New York centennial struggle, held at Irving Hall, although winning no prize, he accred 311 points, the third best run on record. July, 1876, found him at San Francisco, Cal., in company with Daly, Garnier and Sexton. An exhibition tournament took place at Platt Hall, but the affair proved a loss to the managers. In the fall of the same year, at a tournament held in this city, he tied Jos. Dion and Rudolphe secon d and third places. Slosson began the season of 71 at New Orleans, La., having for an opponent Wm. Sexton. The natch occupied three nights, and the $400 stake money fell into the lap of the Vermonter. Score-Sexton, 1.800; Slosson, 976. match the record was again disturbed, Sexton making a run of 411. During the same month at Gaiveston, Texas, two matches were consummated, Sexton losing one and Slosson the other. Subsequently, in November following, Slosson best Sexton and Gallagher at St. Louis, Mo., winning a purse of $200. Journeying again to the Crescent Ci y in January, 1878, he won second prize, beating C. Dion, Day and Rudolphe, Sexton won nrst money. For the championship of America, on June 27, he once more essayed to capture 8-xton. The game took place in this city and Siesson was defeated by a score of 600 to 330. On Dec 27 he made a final dash for the possession of the with the hope of giving the championship a new lease of life. but with his usual luck he was compelled to capitulate, Siesson's wire showing 468 when the champion stopped at 600. When the ew championship was given birth at Cooper Institute last January Slosson stood No. 2 on the list, receiving a prize of $600

MARTIN DENNY WINS A HARD FIGHT.

The prize fight between Martin Denny, of Australia, and Jos Lambert of London, was fought at 9 stone 2½ pounds, in the National Sporting Club, London, England, on Oct. 30 for £100. Barney Sheppard and Harry Gorley, of Australia seconded Denny, while Lambert had the services of Arthur Callan and Harry Speerdon. In the last two rounds Denny began to box with great determination, but Lambert was equal to the occasion, and a splendid bit of give-and take work ensued. Lambert's pluck was groatly admired, but eventually Denny showed auperior judgment, and timed his opponent effectively as he bored After shaking hands prior to the final stage of the contest Lambert began a determined onslaught on his opponent's ribs. Denny sluded many of the blows, and began to laugh and bandy words with his opponent. This brought about another remonstrance from the referee, after which Denny was more circumspect. Smart exchanges followed, and presently Lambert was pushed to the boards. He rose quickly and struggled on gamely to the end, when Denny was declared the winner.

Sufferers from Nervous Debility, Youthful Indiscre tions. Lost Manhood,

BE YOUR OWN PHYSICIAN!

Many men, from the effects of youthful imprudence, have brought about a state of weakness that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever being suspected, they are doctored for everything but the right one. Notwithstanding the many valuable remedies that medical science has produced for the relief of this class of patients, none of the ordinary modes of treatment effect a cure. During our extensive college and hospital practice we have experimented with and discovered new and concentrated remedies. The accompanying prescription is offered as a certain a and speedly carre, as hundreds of cases in our practice have been restored to perfect health by its use after all other remedies failed. Perfectly pure ingredients must be used in the preparation of this prescription.

Mix.

Make 60 pills. Take one pill at 3. p. m., and another on going to bed. In some cases it will be necessary for the patient to take two pills at beddime, making the number three a day. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, and especially in those cases resulting from imprudence. The recuperative powers of this restorative are truly astonishing, and its use continued for a short time changes the languid, debilitated, cerveless condition to one of renewed life and vigor.

As we are constantly in receipt of letters of inquiry relative to this remedy, we would say to these who would prefer to obtain it from us, by remitting $1, a securely scaled package containing $0 pills. carefully compounded, will be sent by return mail from our private laboratory, or we will furnish $ packages, which will ours most cases, for $5.
